

CASE I

Freedom of Speech for All: *Easier

The Supreme Court rules: You are free to say what you think unless your speech puts someone in immediate danger.

In 1969, Clarence Brandenburg and his group, the Ku Klux Klan, had a loud and angry meeting. They said many bad things about people who were a different color or who went to a different church.

The Supreme Court said Clarence Brandenburg could not be arrested.